Presented by the Alaska Railroad Safety Division
& Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation

This training is specifically designed for:

Emergency Service Providers and First Responders:

- Police and Firefighters
- Emergency Medical Personnel
- Public Works, Transportation, Facility Officials

The focus is three-fold:

- passenger train accident emergency response
- hazardous material incident emergency response
- railroad response safety

The Whistle Stop tour underscores the importance of emergency planning, and offers local emergency response groups hands-on training. This is an extraordinary opportunity to help community responders and residents to open a dialogue about responding to emergencies involving trains.

Demonstrations and presentations provide critical up-to-date information about which chemicals are transported through your areas, and how the Alaska Railroad manages risks associated with transporting these chemicals. In addition, rescue technicians, medics, firefighters and other emergency response personnel will learn how best to partner and coordinate with the railroad in emergency situations.
