ARRC Names Seward Passenger Dock to Honor Former Railroader

Anchorage - At its Board meeting in Seward last week, the Alaska Railroad Corporation Board of Directors recognized Seward resident Dale Lindsey's contributions to the Railroad and State of Alaska by naming the Railroad's newly renovated Seward Passenger Dock the "Dale R. Lindsey Alaska Railroad Seward Dock."

Lindsey was born in the railroad town of Seward. A former Alaska Railroad train service employee during the period of Alaska Railroad federal ownership, he also served as a member of the Alaska Railroad Board of Directors for twelve years including presiding as Vice Chair of the Board for seven of those years. Lindsey retired from the Alaska Railroad Board of Directors in 2001.

The Lindsey family shares a rich history with the Alaska Railroad. His father and grandfather both worked on the Alaska Railroad and his brother Jack Lindsey was the Fairbanks Terminal Superintendent in the 1960s and 1970s.

"The Railroad wanted to recognize the lifelong contributions that Dale made to the Alaska Railroad," Chairman John Binkley said. "His impact has been felt not only in his hometown of Seward, but also throughout the State of Alaska. He is someone who never seeks the spotlight, but who has worked quietly behind the scenes to turn the Railroad's vision into reality."

Dale and Carol Ann Lindsey currently reside in Seward and own Harbor Enterprises, an oil resource company serving Alaska and Washington.

ARRC is a self-sustaining, state-owned Corporation that operates without State subsidy, serving a number of railbelt communities from Seward to Fairbanks.
